Turkey War II

A Short History of the East End's Turkey War I and Turkey War II

By Dan Rattiner

Wild turkeys were all over the place here on Long Island when the first settlers landed. The Indians showed the settlers what you could do with them, though, and the first Turkey War ended in a rout. Called the 300 Year War, it ended in the mid-20th century with so few turkeys left on Long Island that when environmentalists first began making speeches in the 1960s, they published great laments about the loss of the Long Island Turkey, which they compared to the loss of the Long Island Oyster and later, to the fate of the Long Island Duck.

And so, in 1992, 79 eastern wild turkeys were trucked in from upstate Saratoga and Albany counties, where they were thriving, to a site in Hither Hills, Montauk, and another at the South Haven County Park in Brookhaven, and the people living nearby were told to leave these new turkeys alone so they could become fruitful and multiply, and so they did.

Today, in the same way that the effort to save the piping plover birds has succeeded beyond anyone's wildest dreams, so now are we experiencing a great eastern wild turkey infestation. Last month, the authorities decided that there would have to be a second Turkey War. But don't tell the turkeys.

"Turkeys are everywhere," one environmentalist said. "They are not afraid of humans. They are dirty, loud, dumb creatures that leave poop behind wherever they go. It's a mess."

There had been many recent encounters between Turkeys and Humans, and none had gone well. Skirmishes took place in Northwest Woods in Springs, in the Redwood community of Hampton Bays, on and near Route 104 between Riverhead and Quogue, where a herd of the beasts caused a traffic jam on November 11 refusing to move off the road, and in the Wildwood section of Riverhead near Wildwood Lake between the Riverhead County Jail and Manorville.

And there were more encounters. Others were reported at Rocky Point, Brookhaven National Lab, Otis Pike Preserve, Southaven County Park, Wertheim National Wildlife Refuge in Yaphank and even, alarmingly, in the Village of Muttontown in Nassau County. All had taken place between November 1 and November 12.

> "You can use a shotgun...a bow and arrow. The enemy, we now think, has a force of about 3,000."

A local carpenter, working on a house restoration in Smithtown near the Muttontown Preserve, had THIS happen.

"I was doing a renovation on a kitchen," Anthony Lupo told Newsday, "and about three feet from the door there was a turkey looking at me. Normally, I would say they are a very wary bird. But not this time."

On November 3, Phil Chasen, an antique dealer, had a turkey jump up on the roof of his car. He took pictures of it with his cell phone and posted them on the Internet.

"He just flew to the top of my van," he said.

Maria Pollatos, 34, took her three-year-old son outside to look at the flock of turkeys that were waddling around near her house on Farm Hill Lane. "My son started running and they ran after him," she told Newsday.

Hunters from around the island gathered in groups to discuss the situation on the evening of November 12. DEC men in camouflage clothing led these meetings and used wooden pointers to indicate locations on a map on the wall as they briefed the hunters.

Turkey War II would begin at dawn on Saturday, November 21, and end at sundown on Wednesday, November 25, also known as Thanksgiving Eve.

"You can use a shotgun and you can use a bow and arrow. The enemy, we now think, has a force of about 3,000. You need a small-game hunting license and a turkey permit. You need to take a hunter safety education course we can provide. Don't use turkey calls, for example. You might get mistaken for a turkey.

"You can hunt on any DEC-managed land in Suffolk, including Otis Pike Preserve, Rocky Point Natural Resources Management Area, the Westhampton Management Area, the West Tiana, Barcelona Neck, Sarnoff Pine Barrens Preserve and any town lands in East Hampton

Trouble at 75

Memories of the Anchorage, the Pais de Paris & 75 Main in SH

By Dan Rattiner

A long time ago, maybe 35 years ago, there stood where 75 Main in Southampton does today a rough Irish bar known as the Anchorage. Oh, there were chic people in the town at that time, but those people hung out in the evenings at upscale places, like the Duke Box on Jobs Lane, the Irving or Herb McCarthy's Bowden Square on North Main. For the workingman in town at that time—this was in the 1970s)—there was the Anchorage.

I tried selling the owners of this place an ad in Dan's Papers once, but it was just once. You opened the front door, a thick wooden affair with a bronze pull and a little window of colored glass about bloodshot-eye high, and a huge overwhelming whiff of beer and throw-up would come wafting out at you. You might gag. I gagged. I went in and tried to sell my wares to the owner, a guy behind the bar with a wet rag. The occupants of the place, a surly lot with peaked caps and unshaven faces, stopped talking and stared at me through the cigarette smoke, wondering what I might say. After a few words, I said, "Thank you very much," and left. And that was that. I never went back.

As near as I could tell, that bar had been a fixture in that town for generations. It was there when my dad moved out east when I was a teenager in the 1950s. It was there in 1975, on that day when I first went in there. And it was there on a warm May day in 1980, when it reopened for the season after a four-month winter renovation.

I happened to be on the sidewalk that sunny May afternoon of the reopening. And I watched as two of the old rummies, guys I had seen from time to time walking in and out of the place, came to look it over.

The neon sign that read "THE ANCHORAGE" was still attached to the building on the second floor, but there was something wrong. The door, now, was a piece of solid glass with a chrome handle. Over the door was a new sign, which said something in French. Neither of the men, as near as I could tell, could make much sense out of it. It read, "La Pais de Paris."

Through the door, they stared wide-eyed at a French chanteuse in a sparkling evening gown, a spotlight on her, singing a French love song into a microphone. There were bits of confetti on the floor, lit up occasionally by the reflected light coming from a slow-moving disco ball hanging from the ceiling in the middle of the room.

Those sitting at the café tables were young and slender, with white bellbottoms, blue blazers, scarves around their necks and cigarettes dangling from the corners of their mouths. They stood or sat around, assuming various fashion-

A SECOND PUBLIC RADIO STATION SCHEDULED

By Dan Rattiner

If you drive through the Connecticut Valley these days, you will be astonished at the number of non-commercial public service radio stations broadcasting to the people of that community. There are college stations, NPR stations, religious stations and stations devoted to jazz, classical music, talk and community action.

Here on eastern Long Island, as I am sure you know, there is just one public radio station that serves the community: 88.3, WLIU-FM, in Southampton. They have been in the news lately as their manager, Wally Smith, steered them safely through a crisis that might have taken them off the air.

Now, it seems, there might soon be a second public radio station in this community. Called WEER-FM, its promoters have just gotten permission this past week to build their programming studios in order to begin broadcasting. They have permission to send a signal out from East Hampton, at 90.7 FM, and they hope to have a second signal by this time next year in Westhampton. A third signal is pending in Southampton, but they can get by with those in East Hampton and Westhampton until that time comes, as those signals can be picked up in Southampton.

The founders of the station are veteran radio broadcasters who now live in our community, M. J. Stutterheim and Barbara Barri. They intend to have a very interesting mix of public service, calendar programming mixed in with a brassy '70s and '80s music sound.

"You might think we are a commercial station," said Barri, the company's president and program manager. "We'll play songs, but then, between and Southold. We're moving in all at once, a Blitzkrieg, from here to here, to here. Keep away from state and county parks, and town lands in Brookhaven, Shelter Island and Southampton. Watch out for civilians.

"The enemy is identifiable easily enough. They stand two-and-a-half to three-feet tall, weigh 25 to 30 pounds, have big plumage, red fleshy wattles under their beaks and feathers, and are round and plump and walk on two little yellow legs.

"They are not afraid of humans. They haven't been hunted in generations. They will come right up to you, but if you try to engage one with your hands, it will elude you and run off, then forget what was going on and go perch or hide somewhere until it can figure it out.

"Your limit is one per day. When you get one, we request—and this is only a request—that you bring it to the Ridge Hunter Check Station so staff can track biological data to evaluate the season. If you don't bring it, that's okay. We'll get a good sampling.

Good luck."

And so, at dawn on November 21, the attack began. It was a horrible experience for the turkeys. There was a lot of shooting and dying and other things. But then, after just six days, the attackers simply retreated. The turkeys were not quite sure why.

One particular turkey survivor, after the body counts and the funerals and the re-grouping and mourning of the dead, took pen in beak and, with great emotion, wrote a song with some very moving words. Some say it reminds them of the song penned by Francis Scott Key after the British bombarded Fort McHenry during the War of 1812 and were expected to take it, but then were found in the morning to have just melted away. The rebels survived another day.

In any case, the wisest and most patriotic turkey survivors say they intend to remember this song for, oh, at least a moment.

"The Feather-Spangled Banner"

Oh, say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose feathered stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there.
O say, does that feather-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On the shore dimly seen thro' the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected, now shines on the stream:
'Tis the feather-spangled banner: O, long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has wash'd out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave:
And the feather-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

O, thus be it ever when turkeys shall stand,
Between their lov'd homes and the war's desolation;
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heav'n-rescued land
Praise the Pow'r that hath made and preserv'd us as a nation!
Then conquer we must, when our cause is just,
And this be our motto: "In Gobble is our trust"
And the feather-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

Ross Dorms

Round Up those Academics, Send them Back Where they Came From

By Dan Rattiner

The Town of East Hampton made the startling discovery last week that at least four-dozen students and faculty members from the Ross School are being housed illegally in private homes.

Ross is an upscale private school with 230 students and 55 faculty members located on Route 114 between East Hampton and Sag Harbor. It bills itself as a "boarding school" for faculty and students who come from outside the area.

"These private homes are being used as group homes," a spokesman for the town said. "Group homes are illegal."

Laws were passed against "group" homes in the Hamptons many years ago, when teenagers and twentysomethings from New York City would rent private homes as "share" houses. As many as 20 or 25 people would sleep on mattresses in a four-bedroom house. Later, the "group" laws got enforced against illegal aliens housed in private homes in what only can be described as dormitory situations.

"This is not 'group' housing," said Richard Hammer, an attorney representing the Ross School. "These are, in academic terms, what you would call 'dorm housing,' essentially designed to operate like a single-family home, with a host family and so forth. 'Dorm' is an interesting term. It is not defined in the Town Code. But that is not what is going on here. A dorm is an unsupervised living scenario. Those from Ross who come into these situations are sort of like part of the family who lives there."

The laws prohibiting group housing in East Hampton are pretty strict. In residential areas, those living in a home are all supposed to be related by blood to the owners of the home, and if there are others, the number of residents unrelated by blood may not exceed four. There are also provisions that say only a certain number of cars may be in a driveway, no persons may be housed "in a dormitory" and no one bedroom may be in a basement. There are also portions of the statute that prevent "excessive turnover," which prevents "group living."

The discovery of the "group" house situation was made when the police, who are constantly on the lookout for group houses in East Hampton, were presented with an anonymous letter sent to the East Hampton Star indicating that the Ross School was operating group-housing units. In it, it was pointed out that a statement on the Ross School website says people from out of the area, mostly from foreign countries, were being put up in "dormitories."

All together, it appears that there are six houses in town that Ross either owns or rents, where about 50 students and faculty members live.

There are two commando-type operations that have been used by the government in the past to root out illegal group houses. Both have conducted night raids—rousting people out of their beds in the middle of the night with flashlights and weapons to demand to see identification to

JACOB INTERVIEWS HIS MOTHER, NORA EPHRON

By Dan Rattiner

Nora Ephron, the well-known screenwriter, film director, author and longtime resident of East Hampton, was interviewed by her son, Jacob Bernstein, at a prep school in Manhattan last Thursday evening. Topics included Ephron's approach to writing and her life as a writer.

Bernstein is a graduate of Dalton, Class of '96. This was, it was believed, the first time he had interviewed his mother in public. The school's theatre, at East 89th Street, was packed.

Ephron, a long time reporter for the New York Post in the 1960s, was famously married for seven years in the 1970s to Carl Bernstein, one of the two investigative reporters who broke the Watergate story that brought down President Richard Nixon in 1974. At that time, the Bernsteins lived on Manhattan's West Side and in East Hampton. In 1980, when their marriage very publicly collapsed, Ephron wrote a book about it, which was made into a movie called Heartburn. Since then she has had a successful career of writing books, essays and screenplays, and lately, directing films. She has three Emmys. She wrote and directed Julie and Julia, a recent film about Julia Child and Julie Powell, the Brooklyn resident who embarked on a program of making one recipe from Child's cookbook, Mastering the Art of French Cooking, each day for 365 days in a row, thus completing the preparation of everything in the book.

Ephron is a slender, handsome woman who looked elegant at the interview in a black dress. Bernstein, tall and square-jawed, wore prove that those they woke up are either related by blood to the owners or are legal residents of the United States up to the total of four. If they are not one or the other they are hauled off. One of these action groups is the mobile taskforce from Homeland Security. The other is a specially trained unit of the local police force—each police force has one—that essentially does the same thing.

Someone who works closely with these task forces who did not want to be identified said this:

"These people sleeping in this dormitory-like situation brought here by the Ross School are not red-blooded Americans. They are high and mighty academic types. Nobody can understand what they say. They laud their smarts over everybody. They hang around libraries and coffee houses. They talk using words like 'therefore' and 'consequently.' Some are from Japan or somewhere. Their living in these houses takes away from the housing possible for red-blooded Americans. It sucks the housing air right out of the community. That they don't speak English makes it even worse. Next they will be going after our jobs. They should be sent back to where they came from."

A spokesman for the Ross School said that Ross offers English as a Second Language to all those who do not speak it. The base tuition for boarding students at the Ross School is $43,900.

"There is a presumption that can be overcome that shows you operate like a family, and I'm confident that under any scrutiny this is fine," said Hammer.

able poses. About the only thing inside that was the same was the smoke.

Both men on the sidewalk rubbed their eyes and looked again at THE ANCHORAGE sign on the front of the building attached to the second floor.

"Nope," one of them said, turning to the other.

And they walked away.

I thought, well, now I can go in there and try again. And so, during an intermission, I did. All inside seemed baffled by the newspaper. They spoke to one another about it. In French. Then they asked me to come back some other time.

That place today, 29 years later, is known as 75 Main. It's a fine restaurant in the early evening and, late at night, a meeting place for the young. The sign on the second floor is long gone. The French café is gone. The whole front of the first floor is made up of wooden doors that can open out to the street, and, at 3 a.m. last Saturday morning of November 12, did, so that the brawl between just about one half of the 50 or so patrons inside could spill out onto the sidewalk.

The police were called. According to Detective Sergeant Herman Lamison, about 10 people were still inside the bar fighting and throwing things, and another 10 were out on the sidewalk, also fighting, with fists and, sometimes, box cutters. Order was restored. The wounded were attended to. Two of them had to be taken to Southampton Hospital for cut wounds. Both men were 27 years old.

One of them, who lives in Brooklyn and also Bridgehampton, was taken to Southampton Hospital for his leg wounds. The other, who is from North Sea, was taken to Stony Brook University Medical Center for treatment to his elbow, which included plastic surgery.

"Neither of these men was fighting with the other," Lamison said. "There were just fights all over the place. Nobody was arrested. The victims said they would not identify their accusers but would attend to matters in their own time and in their own way."

For some reason, this all reminded me of that time when the two old drunks stood out on the sidewalk on a hot, sunny May afternoon and looked up in disbelief at that neon sign. THE ANCHORAGE.

I wonder what they might have made of this.

a sports jacket and jeans. He is currently an editor at The Daily Beast, a web journal.

Bernstein asked his mother questions from notes. He spoke forcefully and directly. Ephron responded sometimes with fits and starts, beginning one thought then skipping to another. She tends to cheerfully surround a topic, but in the end, it all made perfect sense.

Bernstein wanted to know how she had learned to become a screenwriter.

Nora Ephron

"I actually typed one up," she said. "Before All the President's Men came out as a movie, a copy of the screenplay was sent over to Carl and me, and we read it and didn't like it. So we revised it. I happened to be the one sitting at the typewriter as we did this. And so, in typing it, I learned how you do it. If you want to learn how to be a screenwriter, type one up."

"You've had a long career and a reputation as someone who always comes back when knocked down. Do you have any regrets? What is your greatest regret?"

Ephron looked at her son funny. Then she said this: "Well, I have no regrets, none at all. But if I did, maybe it was marrying Carl. But then I wouldn't have had you."

Bernstein elicited many comments from her about her admiration of Mike Nichols and delight in working with him, her successes with some of her other films, like Sleepless in Seattle and Hairspray, and working with Meryl Streep on Julie and Julia, in which Streep played Julia Child.

"You know originally Julia Child was supposed to be played by a different actor. But then that fell through and we had Meryl. She was absolutely sensational."

"Could you have made the movie without Meryl Streep?"

"I could have. But it wouldn't have been as good."

"Isn't it great that her whole career made a comeback?" Bernstein asked. "Not many women actors have that happen."

"No, they do not. Faye Dunaway was another exception."

"Faye Dunaway, even today, looks 39."

"Older women sometimes turn to horror movies to make a living."

"What do you think of the film business today?"

"It's very difficult. Only about four directors are in a position today to make the movies they want to make. The studios find they have to compete. I can't believe that long ago I was so fascinated by the Internet and thought it was our friend. It is making it very difficult for talented people to get the work they want."

"Are you able to get what you want from a scene with just a first take? Clint Eastwood does that."

"So does Sidney Lumet. I don't do a lot of takes, but I rarely keep just the first take. The actors get to improvise with the material in the subsequent takes, and that's much better. So I don't know how some directors can do that."

After the interview, which was about 40 minutes long, the pair took questions from the audience. One came from a woman in the balcony.

"I have known your son for a long time," the woman said to Ephron. "I was his French teacher."

"And I was not a very good French student," Bernstein said.

"My question is," the woman continued, "I noticed that in Julie and Julia, the actress who played Julie, the young woman from Brooklyn, mispronounces the word 'boeuf' in an earlier scene, but as the movie goes along, she slowly gets better at it until the end, when she pronounces it properly. Was that intended?"

Ephron and her son stared at one another for a bit. Then Ephron answered.

"Actually, I have no idea. Perhaps it qualifies as a mistake. I can't pronounce 'boeuf' myself. So I don't really know when somebody fouls it up."

The interview was concluded with a wine and cheese reception in the theatre lobby, where the audience was able to meet the pair up close and personal.

$5 Million Donated to SH Hospital

John Paulson

By T.J. Clemente

The heartbeat of the Southampton medical community, its hospital emergency room, is now poised to be fully equipped to deal with the 21st-century needs in this growing community, thanks to an extraordinarily generous gift from two individuals.

Last week, Jenny and John Paulson donated $5 million for Southampton Hospital to augment its already top-notch emergency room facilities. This gift is the largest of its kind ever given to an East End hospital.

Paulson, founder and chairman of investment firm Paulson & Co., Inc., stated, "As Southampton residents, we have all benefited from the services of the hospital. We are lucky to have such a talented and dedicated team of doctors and caregivers to attend to our emergency needs." The $5 million will be used to provide Southampton Hospital with an enhanced centralized trauma nurses' station and triage area, expanded diagnostic and treatment areas, a "fast track" area for less acute illnesses or injuries, and additional patient and trauma rooms, all of which will substantially strengthen the department's ability to serve patients and their families. The design includes separate weather-protected entrances for walk-in patients and ambulance arrivals, improved traffic flow and enhanced security. Construction is scheduled to be completed by May 2010, and will be dedicated as "The Jenny and John Paulson Emergency Department." Construction will not impede on the current delivery of emergency care.

The Hospital's Emergency Department serves about 25,000 patient visits annually with board-certified emergency physicians and highly-trained nursing staff. The hospital has received high marks—it was named the 2008 winner of

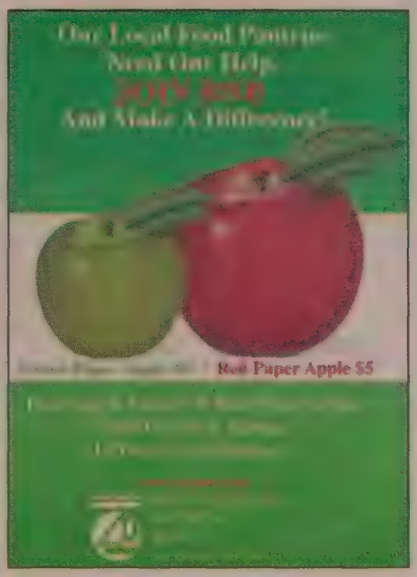
Givin' You the BUSINESS

Charity Cases

By T.J. Clemente



In Suffolk County, despite these difficult times for most people of every economic level, and despite the fact that businesses are struggling through an off-season that's more "off" than many in recent history, the virtue of charity is in full swing. Individuals, non-profits and businesses are giving goods and time. Of course, in Hamptons tradition, some folks are still writing checks to support charitable organizations.

One such organization is Maureen's Haven, which has, with the support of the community, mounted a full-scale attack on the problem of homelessness in Suffolk County. With an army of over 1,200 volunteers and a list of over 15 places of worship offering facilities for scheduled usage, Maureen's Haven gets results. Last year, the organization hosted 153 nights of shelter. It is estimated that the efforts of Maureen's Haven saves Suffolk County taxpayers $350,000 per year in Social Services costs.

Even though the concept of "Homeless in the Hamptons" seems incongruous, it's estimated that there are more than 500 homeless people on the East End. They now have an option beyond sleeping in abandoned boats, tents in the woods or wherever. In a tradition started by the original settlers (in 1630, John Winthrop was lauded for donating his firewood on cold nights to those who ran out, and for arranging lodging for those who had none), East End charity is alive and well, even beyond the glitzy summer benefits. The sheer number of volunteers willing to give their time is noteworthy, as people from all areas of life are stepping up to the plate, including Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, church and school groups, and neighbors acting on their own.

The United Methodist Church in East Hampton is one the newest sites, along with the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, opening its facilities to Maureen's Haven and the homeless. No one showed up for lodging the first weekend, yet volunteer organizers such as Barbara Jordan know as it gets colder and the East Hampton locations become better known, needy souls will come.

In addition to Maureen's Haven, the East Hampton Food Pantry with headquarters in Water Mill is another source of charity. Kathy Byrne, a guiding light at the Pantry, reportedly said that last winter 148 families visited the pantry on Tuesdays, when food is distributed. According to Byrne, that breaks down to 239 adults, 136 children and 43 people over the age of 65. In the last month the Pantry opened a satellite branch in Amagansett, serving 40 families on its very first day.

For-profit businesses are stepping in as well. Bridgehampton National Bank, with a century of doing business on the East End, is supporting local pantries by collecting food items and selling "Paper Apples" in its 15 East End branches. From now through December anyone visiting a BNB branch can support the program by buying a "Green Apple" for $2 or "Red Apple" for $5. The paper apples will be displayed in branches with the names of donors on them. BNB will match donations up to a total of $5,000. For a list of food items most needed, go to bridgenb.com.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

First, congrats to the Shelter Island Volleyball team for making it to the State Championship semifinals! Though they ended up losing—no matter. We on Shelter Island already began plans for a party—no matter how the game turned out.

"Kathy, I'm thinking we could decorate the ferries in the team colors—Hey! You don't suppose they'd let us repaint them..."

"We'd have to get the captains really drunk to get consent. It would be a big job, but I think Peggy could do it. She's got a hollow leg."

"Excellent, Sue. We could have paint cans hidden in the bushes near the ferries, and the minute we get consent, we paint them!"

"We'll need lots of beer and liquor for the party. We can start buying now and hide it, you know, before the kids get it all."

"Good thinking."

"We really should have a clambake, some things are just clambake-able and I think a State Championship is one of them."

"But it's too cold for clamming now."

"It's never too cold for clamming, we just have to find the right guys."

"Men who clam in November. Manly men,who spit in the eye of a freezing wind, crack crabs with their teeth. Men who can go all day with sand in their underwear. Men who use fishing line for dental floss...."

"You've just described half the men here."

"Yes, but just because they can clam in the winter doesn't mean they will. We'll need a plan to get them in that cold water..."

"Beer."

"What? You can't give them beer and expect them to go out on the water."

"No, Sue, we buy all the beer on the island and hold it hostage. Think about it. Just before Thanksgiving and all the football games and they go to the store and there's no beer."

"That is devious, underhanded, inconsiderate and skates the edge of immoral."

"But effective..."

"Okay, you got me there. No clam within a mile of Shelter Island will be safe if the Island's beer supply is on the line. How did you ever learn to be so manipulative and twisted?"

"I have teenagers."

"And they do that to you?"

"They also make you insane, poor, wrinkled and ruthless."

"Is there any way to avoid it?"

"How old are your kids, Sue?"

"Four and two."

"Start drinking now, and plan to go to AA after they graduate."

"And that will stop me from becoming insane, poor, wrinkled and ruthless?"

"No, but you won't remember it happening and that might soften the blow."

the Health Grades Patient Safety Award™. Robert S. Chaloner, Hospital President/CEO, said, "This donation will have an extraordinary impact on our diagnostic and treatment capabilities. As the sole provider of emergency care on the South Fork, we must substantially expand and enhance our services to meet the growing need of our communities. The Paulsons' generosity firmly establishes our ability to provide the best possible care to the East End."

Howard Lorber, Board Chair of the Hospital Foundation, said, "The Paulsons' support is a testament to the generosity within this community and a model for us all to follow."

them, instead of commercials, we will have bulletins from upcoming events and news about non-profits in the community. We should be 100% locally grown broadcasting. We'll be supporting places such as the Nature Conservancy, the Group for the South Fork, the Parrish, Guild Hall, Southampton Hospital and Bay Street."

The station has already looked into several locations, including the Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center, about establishing their studio offices on their properties.

Barri said that their station could probably run on a budget of about $300,000 a year. She envisions about a dozen employees, some of whom would be part-time.

The decision to create the new station came about three years ago when these two broadcasters, who are close friends, discovered that the SEC was auctioning off what would probably be the last FM license on the East End.

"There are about two-dozen non-commercial FM licenses here," Barri said. "But every single one of them, except WLIU, has been awarded to a company based in Connecticut looking for an expanded signal so they could cover the East End. There is very little thought to covering events on the East End. Less than 10% of all the programming of these stations comes from the East End. We couldn't let this last station license get away."

When asked about the difference between what they intend to broadcast and what WLIU-FM currently broadcasts, she pointed out that WLIU has a wonderful talk show in the morning with Bonnie Grice, but as for the rest of it, it is mostly NPR- and BBC-based. WEER would be 100% East End-based. But there is room for both stations, and probably more.

WEER-FM now has in hand permits to send out a signal from a tower based in East Hampton and a permit to build studios and begin broadcasting. They expect to be up and running within the year.

Rhyme NOR Reason

To Life! Short & Sweet, or Long and Lean

By Susan M. Galardi

Just when you think there's no silver lining to the giant cloud that is the economy, glimmers appear. One that caught my eye recently was an article called "Bad times are good for health," based on a study that showed that people were healthier during the Depression than in the boom times before or after.

Reading the article, I had an immediate explanation. People were still getting sick, they just couldn't afford to go to the doctor. Instead, they stayed home, guzzled castor oil and applied mustard plasters. The population wasn't healthier—it was undiagnosed.

But as I read on, that theory fell apart. The study also showed that actual life expectancy improved in down economies. During the Depression, whites gained six years, nonwhites, eight years. This pattern was borne out in both the recession of 1921 and '38. When the economy improved, the trend reversed: life expectancy dropped.

One theory was that when people are in the red, they eat, drink, smoke and party more. In down times, people eat and drink less, sleep more and don't work as much, meaning fewer accidents in the workplace (particularly industrial accidents). The theory goes on to say that, in hard times, people rely on friends and family more. Everyone knows how beneficial social support is to health and wellbeing.

According to 2005 statistics, the average life expectancy of an adult in the U.S. is 77.6 (white women still live the longest—80.5 years). With the state of affairs we're in, we should all live to 100. Or maybe not.

Take your average Baby Boomer, like me. We've lived through a half-dozen recessions: early '60s, two in the '70s, the '88 real estate bust, early '90s dotcom debacle, and the current slump. That parade of hard times should add 36 years to our lives, right? But we also lived through the boom time of the '80s and the economic bloating at the early part of this century. So there goes 12 of those years right off the bat.

High times taketh away, low times giveth

For those who hung out at Limelight and its predecessors like Studio 54, you might as well lop off another six. If you were one of the experimenters in the '60s, what did that cost you? I had a friend who was a long-time denizen of the Factory with Andy Warhol et al. That had to set her back a good 12 years. She did go to rehab—for five YEARS—and probably repaid her life-debt a little. She also became a marathon runner during that time. (What else was there to do?) That most likely bought her another three years at least.

The question is: Wouldn't it all just come out in the wash? You lose some when times are good, gain it back when times are bad—a reverse stock market where gains and losses are measured in years. Does HOW bad it was for a person have a greater or lesser consequence? Will the people who lost millions to Madoff live longer than those who were simply out of work for a few months? And what about the anxiety that comes for those people, knowing they'll live longer, but with much less cash in the retirement fund?

The bottom line is, despite our struggles now, we'll all probably live to talk about it a lot longer. Imagine, six more years of being able to bore our grandchildren with, "I remember the big recession of ought-nine...," at which time the kids will engage their Atomic Cell Scramblers and disappear into their hologram video games.

So, depending on how you do the math, our lives will be either short and sweet, or long and lean. Which will it be? Something to ponder as we wait in line for our swine flu shots.

Art Commentary
by Marion Wolberg Weiss

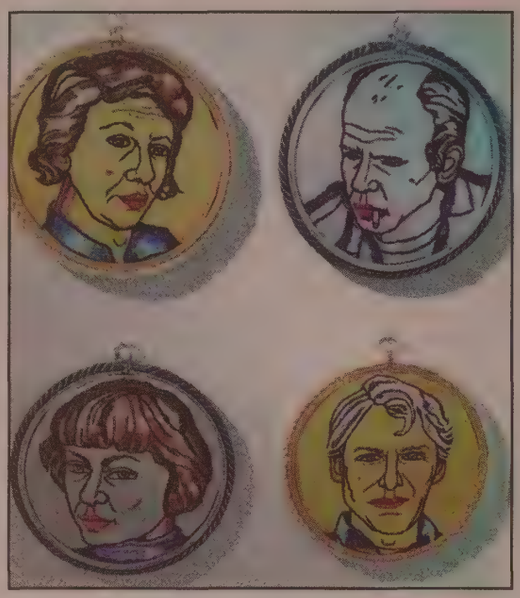
The Gift of Art, Winter Tree & Surface

This column does not purposely promote commercialism in art. Until possibly now, that is, considering that Christmas is coming and there's quality art available at affordable prices despite the economic crisis. Even so, this critic would have critiqued the following shows regardless of the season or financial situation. Simply put: the exhibits stand on their own merits.

Dan Rattiner's series of drawings and cartoons (1957-2009) at the Winter Tree Gallery in Sag Harbor is a delightful change from the conventional works usually found at galleries. That the pieces are indigenous to our area make them doubly delightful.

Rattiner has a penchant for tracking human and societal foibles. His ability to focus on the annoyances of daily life in the Hamptons, including crowded roads and airport skies, is likewise laudable. Yet Rattiner doesn't merely concentrate on our personal daily activities, as is proven in his observations concerning class structure (i.e. a bum in a telephone booth answering, "Speaking").

A group show at East Hampton's Surface Library is a delight as well. For a relatively small space, the gallery manages to expertly display a diverse range of work, highlighting different media, material, styles and aesthetics. At first glance, a particular highlight appears to be the presentation of glass/ceramics by Bob Bachler, Ted Tyler and Hokanson + Dix. Each work has a distinct shape, color and/or glaze—qualities that are hard to come by in today's marketplace.



Christa Maiwald's embroided "Artist Charms"

As we look around, it seems as if other distinctive pieces come to light; everything on display is arresting in some way. Consider Pat Swyler's wall and earthenware figures, mostly Asian-inspired sculptures that are dainty and potent at the same time.

Such contradictory traits, in fact, characterize the show. The works may be small, but they are mighty in their techniques and use of materials; they are powerful yet whimsical in tone. That goes for each and every piece.

Let's consider other examples. Christa Maiwald's "Artist Charms" are equally strong and charming, featuring embroidered portraits of artist couples. What's special, besides Maiwald's craftsmanship, are the little touches, like Jackson Pollock's cigarette and de Kooning's curl on his forehead.

Teri Kennedy's abstract sculptures of found objects are contradictory as well, featuring charming shapes combined with sturdy items, including wood and wire. Gabriele Raacke's archival ink prints on watercolor paper are similarly fanciful, featuring shoe-like forms that resemble animals (and that also recall Andy Warhol's footwear). This whimsical animal theme is continued with pieces by Trish Franey.

While we can't describe James Kennedy's paintings as "dainty" or "charming," his "Moodscapes" are endearing without being "cute." His evocation of particular states of mind or material is precious, to say the least. They are images we can't forget in a hurry.

Rattiner's drawings will be on view at the Winter Tree Gallery until Jan. 7, 2010. Call 631-725-0097.

"The Gift of Art" will be at the Surface Gallery until Dec. 20. Call 631- 291-9061.

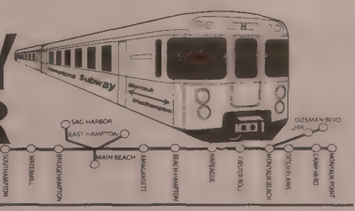
THE HAMPTON SUBWAY NEWSLETTER



"Along with the New York Subway System, Hampton's Subway is the only underground transit system in the State of New York."

By Dan Rattiner

Riders this week: 6,422

Rider miles this week: 88,421

DOWN IN THE TUBE

Colson Whitehead, the author of this year's bestselling book about the Hamptons, Sag Harbor, was seen talking to Dan Rattiner, the author of last year's bestselling book about the Hamptons, In the Hamptons, on the train between Water Mill and Southampton. They were discussing their future endeavors. Rattiner's sequel, In the Hamptons Too, will appear in May 2010.

STRIKE FIZZLES

A strike by the Hampton Subway Motorman's Union ended in failure last Monday morning. The plan was to delay all trains by 20 minutes, and there was little doubt that the motormen could do that just by keeping their trains in the station for that amount of time. The word went out. The riders braced for the worst. But when the time came, the motormen held the first train for the day, at 5:22 a.m., until 5:42 a.m., then proceeded at 20-minute intervals for the rest of the day. Since the trains run at 20-minute intervals anyway, all they accomplished was to be one train short at the start of the day and then one train long at the end—a 2:22 a.m. after the regular 2:02 a.m. the next morning. Nobody noticed the difference.

"We screwed up," said Ian MacTavish, the head of the Motorman's Union.

The union was so upset by this screw-up and all the bad press they received, that two days later at their regular weekly meeting, they decided to acquiesce to management's demands just to avoid further embarrassment.

FOXWOODS MIGHT DIG FROM THEIR END

The long drawn-out attempt to dig a subway tunnel between Sag Harbor and Foxwoods, Connecticut got another boost last week. Foxwoods, which is experiencing a slowdown in gambling revenue, is considering digging from their end instead of waiting for the tunnel to arrive from our end. Their hope is that this new access will bring fresh revenue.

Hampton Subway's first attempt at digging to Foxwoods ended in disaster when the tunnel struck oil under Long Island Sound, which caused the flooding of the tunnel, the workmen being evacuated and the project being walled off with pumps constantly going to keep the oil from overwhelming the entire line.

The second attempt tried to make a big circle around the western end of the underground oil pool, but after heading west just off Long Island's North Shore and crossing Long Island Sound from Port Jefferson to Bridgeport, the supervisors of the work lost their bearings. In the darkness underground, the tunnel, unnoticed by them, looped around and hooked back up with itself but going the other way. Currently work is at a standstill, and the matter has gone into litigation with the contractor.

RATE INCREASE

Cost per ride on the subway increased last Monday from $1.75 to $2. The reason for the increase has nothing to do with the finances of Hampton Subway, which are an open book and doing very well, thank you very much. The increase is because of the Metropolitan Transit Authority, which has asked Hampton Subway, which is not part of that system, to donate 25 cents per ride to help subsidize the losses incurred by the MTA during this past year. Being good neighbors, we have agreed to do so.

TURKEY STAMPEDE STAMPEDED

The planned Turkey Day Stampede, which was to take place at 2 a.m. Thursday morning after the subway system closed for the night for maintenance, was cancelled, as those of you who went down to the platforms to watch discovered. The cancellation was a last-minute thing brought about by protesters from PETA and members of other environmental groups carrying signs.

The turkeys would have been herded by cowboys from Deep Hollow Ranch in full cowboy regalia from Montauk to Westhampton, an effort that was expected to take four hours because of the fact that turkeys have such little

THE HAMPTON SYNAGOGUE

TwentysomeThing... By David Lion Rattiner

The Four Seasons

In Southampton, Jean Mackenzie, the small-business owner of The Clamman and Four Seasons Caterer Southampton, is facing a battle, and it has to do with the name of her business.

Yep, Four Seasons, as in the Four Seasons restaurant in Manhattan (not the internationally famous hotel by the way, but we'll get to that later), called their lawyer. The lawyer, Karen A. Monroe, sent a letter to Mackenzie that threatened "appropriate action" if she didn't do something about the name of the business she has owned and advertised for the last five years.

Hire a lawyer and fight back! Right? Wrong.

Everybody wants to believe that owning a small business in the Hamptons means that money is coming out of your ears. After all, it's the Hamptons. But running a business that's flush with customers just three months out of the year, and factoring in Manhattan-priced overhead is not easy, and Mackenzie has expressed to her friends that she doesn't have the resources to battle Classic Restaurants Corp., the Four Seasons restaurant parent company. What's fair? What's right? To me, it seems obvious—let Mackenzie keep her name. Yes "Four Seasons" is registered in her name, but so is "Caterers Southampton." She's been in business for five years. Why the complaint now?

Many businesses all over the country share names. Have you heard of The Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts? One of the biggest brand names in the world, next to Hilton and Marriott? Guess what? The restaurant and the hotels are completely different owners.

The Four Seasons restaurant had the name before the hotel, and judging by the success of the hotels around the world for the last 50 years, name infringement didn't apply there. In fact, according to the owner of the restaurant in a message on citysearch.com, the hotel chain is frequently confused with the eatery.

In Massachusetts, there's a furniture store called Seasons Four. In Greensboro North Carolina, there's a shopping center called Four Seasons Town Centre. In St. James, right here on Long Island, there's a cesspool company (I swear it's true) called Four Seasons Cesspool Inc. Was a letter sent to them as well?

Why is a restaurant in Manhattan so amped about a caterer in Southampton? It's of course about protecting their business image, but really? Is a Manhattan restaurant feeling ANY financial loss to a caterer 100 miles away? And hiring a lawyer? What is so ridiculous is that The Four Seasons Hotels is separate from the restaurant in Manhattan that sent Mackenzie the letter. That makes this letter almost comical.

I had to find out for myself, so I called the Four Seasons restaurant in Manhattan. The man who answered the phone said, "We are the Four Seasons restaurant and are totally unrelated to the hotel."

"Separate owners? Everything?" I said.

"Everything. Amazing, huh? Would you like the hotel number for the Four Seasons in Manhattan?"

"Sure."

He knew the number by heart.

feet.

We did inform the general public with signs posted at all the entrances to the platforms just after midnight. We also sent out emails and press releases at that hour. We regret any inconvenience. Just so you know, the turkeys were turned over to PETA, who released them into the wild at the Montauk Lighthouse station, where they were at that hour.

COMMISSIONER ASPINALL'S MESSAGE

I am in Foxwoods this weekend, providing encouragement to the management here as they consider starting to construct the subway tunnel to Sag Harbor from their end to meet up with ours currently stalled just south of Bridgeport, Connecticut. The work is hot and heavy in these smoke-filled meeting rooms as the debate goes back and forth, so I might have to stay a full week rather than just the weekend. Be assured I will do my best for the interests of Hampton Subway.

The souvenir book, One Year on the Hampton Subway, is selling well at all BookHampton stores throughout the Hamptons. Get your copy today. It's only $18.48, which, with tax, comes to $20.01. We tried making it come out to exactly $20, but we couldn't do it, was the problem.

Tax Credits & Loans from Feds and State

By T.J. Clemente

On November 8, in the Oval Office of the White House, President Obama signed a stimulus bill that also included an extension of first-time homebuyer tax credit until May 30, 2010.

Under the bill, first-time homebuyers, defined by the law as buyers who "have not owned a principal residence during the three-year period prior to the purchase," may be eligible for a tax credit of up to $8,000. A "repeat buyer," meaning an existing homeowner who has been residing in his principal residence for five consecutive years out of the last eight and is purchasing a new principal residence, may be eligible for a tax credit of up to $6,500. In fact, all U.S. citizens who file federal tax returns are eligible for some assistance in this program, excluding households with annual income over $225,000. (Partial credit is allowed in some cases up to $245,000.) The eligibility period for the tax credit is defined under the extension as "homes purchased after Nov. 6, 2009, and before May 1, 2010." In the spirit of fairness, "all home purchases subject to a binding sales contract signed by April 30, 2010, will qualify for the tax credit provided closing occurs prior to July 1, 2010." And you must be at least 18 to get the credit. (It was reported that one credit was awarded to a four-year-old.)

The amount of tax credit is based on the combined income of the households or the individuals. The full credit is available as long as their modified adjusted gross income (MAGI) is less than $125,000. Single or head-of-household taxpayers who earn between $125,000 and $145,000, and married couples who earn between $225,000 and $245,000, are eligible to receive a partial credit. No tax credits are available for single taxpayers whose MAGI is greater than $145,000, or married couples with a MAGI that is in excess of $245,000. All houses with a purchase price of less than $800,000 qualify, including newly-constructed or resale homes, whether single-family detached dwellings, town houses or condos, provided that the homes will be used as a principal residences. (Vacation home and rental property purchases do NOT qualify.)

These types of incentives are always good news to anyone purchasing or thinking about purchasing a new home. The tax credit reduces your federal tax by its total amount—meaning that if you're scheduled to pay $10,000 in federal income tax and your tax credit for the home purchase is the full $8,000, then you pay only $2,000 in federal tax. In fact if your federal tax was $4,000 and your tax credit was $8,000, you would receive a $4,000 refund from the IRS!

Qualified homebuyers for the tax credit can take it on their 2009 or 2010 income tax return. There is a penalty for the homebuyer who doesn't maintain that home as the primary residence for three years. If the homeowner sells or stops using the purchased home as a primary residence the tax credit must be repaid in full. The extension of the "Tax Credit for First Time Buyers" was part of a $24 billion economic stimulus bill. For more details about the program contact Congressman Tim Bishop's office, either locally or in Washington D.C.

Another program to benefit homeowners has recently worked its way through the halls of state government. The New York State Energy Loan Program mirrors many provisions of three bills championed by local New York State Assemblyman Fred Thiele. Denise McRedmond, a legislative aide to Thiele, said the bill is awaiting Governor Paterson's signature.

The completed bill offers homeowners and business owners an opportunity to get financing on energy -saving improvements that range from "window replacement, caulking, weather-stripping, air sealing, and insulation, heating and cooling upgrades." New installations of renewable energy systems are also eligible.

The low-interest loans will be made by participating towns with repayment to be added to the property tax bill. The town loans will be funded by $454 million in federally appropriated funds. Towns will have the responsibility of inspecting and making sure the work is done. McRedmond sent out an email in which Thiele said, "Many homeowners and business owners would jump at the chance to reduce their carbon footprint and help promote greener, more eco-friendly operations, but making those improvements can be very costly. This program provides a valuable incentive and helps offset the immediate costs by creating a loan system that allows for payments to be made on your property tax bills over time."

Over The Barrel... with Lenn Thompson

Macari Vineyards

In the summer, you'll often find Macari Vineyards wines in my glass, be it their surprisingly expressive stainless steel chardonnay, their beautifully crisp sauvignon blanc, or their different-every-year rose. With those summer-style wines, Macari's Vineyards, which run from Route 48 north almost right into the Long Island Sound, seem to capture a salt-water, saline minerality that is both refreshing and intriguing on the palate.

Sometimes it can be easy to forget just how good some of Macari's red wines are, but a recent tasting served as an excellent reminder.

Co-owner Joe Macari manages the winery's vineyards following many organic, sustainable and biodynamic principals. He also has cattle on the property and keeps bees (the honey is available in the tasting room). Spend any time with Joe and his passion for his land and the diversity he encourages is palpable. We all wish we were as passionate about something in life. Trust me.

I can't objectively say that that passion comes through in the wines – which are made by Paola Valverde – but subjectively I can say that I like to think so.

One of the better under-$20 wines made on Long Island, the Macari Vineyards NV Sette ($17) is a blend of 50% merlot and 50% cabernet franc. Its plummy on the nose with spicy oak, tarragon and a briny, minerally streak. Medium-bodied, the palate features more plum and some cherry flavors accented by brown spice, leaf tobacco, spicy oak and fresh-cut herbs. The tannins are light, making this an approachable, drink-now offering with good acidity for every-night drinking. This edition of the non-vintage blend was released in April.

Not many local wineries bottle syrah varietally, but for the second time (the first being in 2005), Macari has with its Macari Vineyards 2007 Syrah ($35), a big, mouth-filling wine with intense black pepper spice on the nose with blackberry and blueberry fruit, violets and wet topsoil aromas beneath. The palate is full-bodied and fairly straightforward with more spice, blueberries, black cherry and a vaguely meaty character. The finish is medium-length but features an interesting pencil-lead note.

My favorite of the new table red releases is the first release of Macari Vineyards 2007 Dos Aguas ($27), named for the Long Island Sound and Great Peconic Bay, the two bodies of water that surround North Fork wine country. It's a blend of 45% cabernet sauvignon, 36% merlot, 15% cabernet franc and 4% malbec, and while still a baby in its development, is more approachable that you might think. The nose opens with intense pipe tobacco and licorice-y Thai basil and oregano, with black cherry and green olive beneath. Black cherry leads the way on the balanced palate with accents of tobacco, black licorice, dried herbs and more green olive. The tannins are firm, but will integrate with more bottle time. The finish lingers for 30-plus seconds and features tobacco and spice. There are values at every price point and I think this qualifies as a terrific value at under $30.

The last of the wines tasted is notable largely for its uniqueness. Macari Vineyards 2007 Block E Cabernet Franc ($40) is made with 100% cabernet franc grapes that were harvested, frozen in a commercial freezer and then processed to create a sweet dessert wine. The aromas and flavors are somewhat simple, mostly sweet strawberry jam with subtle spice and a sweet herby edge. Sweet on the fore- and mid-palate, it finishes almost dry because of fresh acidity. It's not going to overtake Macari's other dessert wines as my local favorites, but it's interesting and a must-try if they are pouring it in the tasting room.

Visit to learn more about the winery, the wines and to get directions to their two tasting rooms – one on Route 48 and the other on Main Road.

Your Guide to Holiday Events and Shopping on the East End

By David Lion Rattiner

Is it really that time of the year again? It sure is. The Christmas shopping season is here and it's time to gear up and hit the streets of the East End to get your family and those special people in your life gifts for the holidays. But there is absolutely no reason to be scared of the price tags in "The Hamptons" this time of year. It's the off-season for the Hamptons, which means outrageous deals on topnotch products and gifts that will surely have your family and friends smiling ear-to-ear. What's so great about shopping on the East End during the off-season is the experience, the surprising sales and, of course, some of the best and most unique brands in the entire world. All of this takes place while the best community leaders organize wonderful holiday events such as tree lightings and ceremonies. Here is a guide to give you a start.

East Hampton

East Hampton is magical during the holidays with plenty of shopping and plenty to do. A fantastic event will take place Saturday, November 28 at the LongHouse Reserve. If you've ever been there, you know how special of a place this art garden is. The LongHouse reserve has planned a Holiday Walk through the garden while offering hot rum to its guests. You can also place a wish on the Yoko Ono Wish Tree that is there. Def check this one out. The LongHouse Reserve is located at 133 Hands Creek Road in East Hampton. Call 631-329-3568 for more info.

On Saturday, Dec. 5, The East Hampton Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a Santa parade, with Santa himself to be present. The parade takes place at 10 a.m. and brings the entire town to life for the holidays. You aren't going to want to miss all of the trees that the Town and Village plant throughout East Hampton either. So spend the day watching the parade and then go shopping, and afterwards watch as the entire town sparkles with hundreds of Christmas trees lining the streets. For more information about the parade, call 631-324-0362.

Shopping

Good places to go shopping for gifts in East Hampton include all of the stores on Main Street and Newtown Lane. This includes Bonne Nuit for children's clothing and lingerie on Main Street. Err, A parent By Susan Galardi

Other Things to be Thankful For

"If you're down and confused, and you don't remember who you're talkin' to, concentration slips away, 'cause your baby is so far away.

"Well there's a rose in the fisted glove and the eagle flies with the dove, and if you can't be with the one you love, honey, love the one you're with."

We can be grateful to Stephen Stills for those lyrics. And even though there have been many grown-up interpretations, on a basic level it could be argued that the song is about gratitude.

I love Thanksgiving because it's a time to be grateful. That's it. No other feeling is permitted. Just try to complain and you'll be branded an "ingrate" and banished to the kids' table. The whole family isn't able to come home this year? Be grateful for those who are there. Not able to be with your bio-family? Be grateful for the "family" you're with.

Growing up, I enjoyed Norman Rockwell Thanksgivings: My mother cooking an enormous turkey and catering-hall-sized platters of side dishes for our family of eight, as the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade blared from the TV. Later in the day, my father and brothers retired to the living room for football on that tiny black-and-white screen – a typical American family scene.

Unfortunately, my father passed away when I was six, and things changed. A few older siblings moved on and out. My mother remarried and we had a new "father," if that's possible. A Rutgers study from 2005 showed that only 63% of American children grow up with both biological parents – the lowest figure in the Western world. I'm sure that percentage was higher in the 1960s, but needless to say, that construct no longer defined our family unit.

As in many households, the group at our table changed from year to year, with an ebb and flow of in-laws, grandchildren, girlfriends and boyfriends. One brother joined the Marines. One sister got married and spent Thanksgiving with "the other side," as my mother called her in-laws. But the family members who showed up sat at that grand table, grateful for those who were there.

This Thanksgiving, in addition to being grateful for a family Thanksgiving at our home, I'm thankful for things beyond "the ones I'm with." Writing a parenting column, I get a lot of press releases and information about news and trends. Right now, two developments that affect children and families make me happy.

I'm grateful that research continues to show that hitting a child is wrong, and that spanking falls squarely under that header of hitting. IQ tests were given to two large groups of kids – one aged two to four, the other five to nine. Four years later, the same kids were tested again. Of the younger group, those who had been spanked lost five IQ points. Those spanked in the older group lost three points.

The idea of a large, strong adult spanking a two-year-old is enough to make me lose my mind, let alone IQ points. But that's a different column. The outcome of the study was that spanking stunts a child's long-term intellectual growth. Researchers believe that the stress that goes along with the fear of being physically harmed may interfere with brain development. It's also been shown that physical punishment leads to more aggressive behavior among teens. The recommendation to parents was "reduce and potentially eliminate...any physical punishment." Hopefully, this practice will continue to fall out of favor.

I'm grateful that driving drunk with a child in the car is now considered a felony. Governor Paterson recently signed into law that drivers with a blood-alcohol (BAC) level of 0.08 who have a minor 15 or younger in the car would be charged with a felony, punishable by up to four years in prison.

It's not that hard to reach .08 BAC. I went online to a site that has a BAC calculator and learned that a 140-pound woman who has two 5-ounce glasses of wine over a period of one hour is already up to .05% BAC. The calculator gave the results with the message, "Possibly Impaired, Do Not Drive."

With the holidays here, as we celebrate with our bio-families, extended families and families of friends, we can be grateful for the ones we're with, and make sure they remain with us, physically and emotionally safe and sound, for holidays to come.

Honoring the Artist: Robert Michaels

This week's cover featuring the Montauk Lighthouse holds special meaning for the artist, Robert Michaels. According to Michaels, the Lighthouse is where he would go for solace after his wife passed away. It's also where he likes to take out-of-town visitors.

As calming as the setting is, there's a bit of whimsy at play with the snowman in the foreground. Such an addition of incongruity has become a recurring element, as has Michaels' use of background-foreground composition. Car motifs abound in his body of work, too. Consider, for example, the model sitting on a car in the middle of an otherwise normal street, and the vehicle on Route #66 in the background, with girls eating ice cream in the foreground.

Other aspects "mark" Michaels' images, including his depiction of generic Hollywood movies, like both "Homeland Insecurity," which mirrors a horror film (complete with a scary car in the background), and a gangster scene with a typical Mafia-type vehicle.

While many of Michaels' images may be tongue-in-cheek, some recent ones are quite personal. The following conversation captures the spirit of these works.

Q: There's an image of a boy in goggles imitating an airplane as an airplane flies overhead in the foreground, and a young girl positioned in the background. What's the meaning behind this?

A: The young woman is how I imagine my fiancé, Courtenay, to have looked at that age.

Q: Are there other works similar to this?

A: Yes, there's one showing a boy holding a girl up on a white horse. That's an imagined Courtenay, again, in her younger years.

Q: And the boy?

A: That's me.

Q: These images not only suggest a narrative but also have some truth to them.

A: Courtenay was an Olympic athlete, and she's a pilot.

Q: Thus the horse, which you said you shot in Montauk, and the airplane image. Even so, how do you create the images, including the one on the cover?

A: They are digitally rendered and painted. They are a composite of different photographs. The images seem less complicated in terms of visual composition; they look more simplistic in their visual impact.

Q: These last images are more subjective, obviously, and personal. Less about pop culture and more about connections between people. What has changed in your life to cause this?

A: I was kind of isolated here in the Hamptons, but now I have a family. I went to see my son in California recently, and Courtenay has several children. It's changed my life.

Q: And the future?

A: We're moving to Bend, Oregon, where we'll move into Courtenay's home. She's also planning a show for me, which I'm looking forward to. And I may resurrect a company designing luggage tags that I had going a while back.

Q: Courtenay said something very encouraging about the future.

A: She said my best work is yet to come.

Jammin' at Bay Street

By Tiffany Razzano

With Sag Harbor's Bay Burger closing for the winter season, the progressive jazz jam session that has built up a following there since its first event in April will keep the music going at Bay Street Theatre during the winter months.

Phil Lehans

Steve Watson, Claes Brondal, Larry Marci,

The first Bay Burger Jam Session at Bay Street will be held on Dec. 3 at 7 p.m. After taking the remainder of December off, it will start up again on Jan. 7 and be held every subsequent Thursday. Every event is free and open to the public, as the jam's founder and drummer Claes Brondal's main purpose was to create a weekly event that would expose the community – especially children within the community – to different types of music. Brondal actually got the idea for the jam session from working with children in local schools, teaching them about the roots of music. "I realized that a lot of these kids had never experienced live music up close, if at all, before," he said. "I definitely felt the need in the community. I want to make jazz accessible."

Brondal, originally from Denmark, realized that organizing such an event would benefit not just the community of listeners who would make up the audience, but the musicians as well, after he realized there were very few venues for this sort of music on the East End. "I believe the art of music can only really be practiced in front of a live audience," he said. "You can practice on your own until you're blue in the face, but if you don't put it in context of a live audience, it loses its value." So he got to talking to Bay Burger co-owner Joe Tremblay, and the jam sessions were born last spring.

Stemming back to New York City during the jazz era, when musicians would gather after their regular gigs to collaborate and jam together, these jam sessions have been growing from the very beginning. With a house band that consists of Brondal on drums and other local musicians, you never know who will turn up each week to perform. Sometimes it might just be the house band on stage, while other times you might catch up to 12 musicians, including vocalists and a horn section, performing. And the jazz music performed takes on an inventive feel, incorporating Latin, hip-hop, gospel, soul, R&B and more. Musicians taking the stage range from 19 to 70 years old. "It definitely takes on an eclectic feel," Brondal said.

Brondal reached out to Bay Street to see what he could do for the jam session during the off-season and found that the powers that be there had actually been interested in contacting him. The Bay Burger Jam Sessions in collaboration with Bay Street, as it's being called, will host its kick-off session, a benefit for the program on Dec. 3. For more information, go to baystreet.org.

Universal Car Care

You don't have to be a Democrat, Republican or Independent to agree that the universal healthcare of your expensive car is very important. Unfortunately, the only time that the hapless owner really has car care is when the car is new and under a factory warranty. Once the warranty period is over, you're on your own, and all that's left is "the public option" for repairs. So let a group of responsible car gurus and I give you some advice on car care.

When the warranty period of your car is nearing its end, check with your dealer and see if he can extend the FACTORY WARRANTY. Notice I said "factory warranty." It has come to my attention that many other types of private, non-factory warranties offered are less than ideal, with some of them being downright crooked. Be aware that many extended warranties, factory or otherwise, can be expensive. You can also buy a used car that is dealer-certified, but be aware that it has to be the same make of a model the dealer sells new. In other words, a Lexus dealer cannot certify a used Mercedes. These certified cars are usually good deals, but remember, they are usually more expensive than an uncertified car.

I think it was Hugh Hefner (or was it Jack LaLanne? or perhaps Cher?) who said that age 70 is the new 40. Anyway, when it comes to used cars and car mileage, 90,000 miles is the new 50,000 miles. Cars, like humans, are in better shape and running longer. Part of the reason is that today's cars are built better and filled with better lubricating oils and cleaner burning gasoline. BMW recommends that one change the synthetic oil in their cars every 15,000 miles. This is certainly a radical departure from the old recommendation of every 3,000 miles. I personally feel that to be safe, one should change oil at least every 7,500 miles, especially if one is using regular non-synthetic oil. Remember, most car engines are cooled by water AND oil, and oil is the lifeblood of your engine. Oil changes are really important.

With winter just around the corner, another thing to remember is to let the car warm up before you floor the gas pedal in the morning. Sure, you can drive slowly as soon as you start the car, but revving that motor when cold is not good. Most wear on the metal part inside a motor happens during a cold start. Another fact you may not know: even though the water temperature gauge may indicate that the car's warming up, the oil inside the engine takes much longer to get hot. Because oil is much denser than water, on a really cold morning it can lag behind the water temperature as much as five to 10 minutes. Other devices in your car that hate the cold are the transmission and shock absorbers. You can barely shift a Ferrari or Porsche when its gearbox is ice-cold. That's because these iconic cars talk to their drivers that way. When it's cold, go, but go slow. Your car will like you better and last a lot longer if you let it warm up.

So cars last longer and seem to run better, but what about post-dealer universal healthcare for them? I asked several experts in the field for their advice.

Al Gore: "Car care is important because the better a fossil-fueled car runs, the fewer harmful fumes it expels from its exhaust pipes. Hopefully, all cars will soon be electric with zero emissions, and electric cars will need very little care. Just plug 'em in and go."

Nancy Pelosi: "Universal car care is good for the people. However, 40% of Americans don't take proper

Beauty/Fashion

Healthy Teeth, Happy Life

By Maria Orlando Pietromonaco

Move over breast implants and hair transplants. In case you haven't noticed, the latest craze in personal enhancement is brighter, more beautiful smiles. It seems that everywhere you look people are flashing their perfect, pearly whites.

In the quest for looking younger and preserving whatever beauty we were intrinsically blessed with, more of us are focusing on our teeth. With new techniques and innovations evolving in recent years it has become easier and more attainable to reach our goal of a great smile.

Dr. Howard A. Popper, a dentist and periodontist with offices in both Melville and Port Jefferson, has over 33 years of dentistry under his belt. His practice is comprehensive, specializing in all phases of dentistry including cosmetic dentistry, periodontology, restorative dentistry and general oral health. He is joined by his son, Dr. Jason Popper, and his daughter, Dr. Marlisa J. Popper.

One of Dr. Howard Popper's primary focuses and areas of expertise is dental implants. If you have missing teeth or are in the process of losing teeth, dental implants can be the answer to your problem. They not only augment your physical appearance, but they can also help with speech and chewing issues as well as stop jawbone loss. Advances in dentistry have allowed for the artificial tooth roots to be fused to the jawbone, making for a solid foundation for tooth replacements.

Dr. Popper is specifically trained in the Immediate Load Procedure, where the implants are placed in a single visit. This newly developed "Teeth in an Hour" concept allows patients to leave the office the same day with a fully functioning brand-new set of teeth. How's that for immediate gratification?

An attractive set of choppers doesn't come so easily, though, and our overall oral health is of primary concern. Periodontal disease (disease of the gums) is serious, and although it can actually affect your heart, clean and healthy gums are an essential starting point in any cosmetic dentistry plan.

As part of any tooth recovery and restoration program your gum health will be evaluated, and then necessary action will take place and may include root planning, scaling and curettage. In some cases further treatment might include periodontal surgery, which is essentially a deep cleaning underneath the gums.

Another phenomenon in chic teeth is teeth whitening. People can't seem to get their teeth white enough, and they are trying every method available to get their sparklers spotless. The terms "bleaching" and "whitening" are often used interchangeably, although they are actually two entirely different procedures. Bleaching involves using bleach to whiten teeth beyond their natural color. Whitening refers to simply cleaning teeth to restore the tooth's natural color.

The applications and reasons for whitening seem endless. There are products available in stores – kits, gels, strips, trays, and paint-on applications that promise bone-white teeth in no time. Professional whitening techniques done in the dentist's office promise significant color change in 30 to 60 minutes. It all depends on what you're willing to spend and what your problems are to begin with.

So if you're lacking the confidence to open your mouth into a big, happy smile, maybe it's time you looked into an oral makeover, whether it be drastic reconstruction, moderate aesthetic work or simple color lift. A flattering smile can really alter the quality of your life as well as your self-esteem.

care of their cars, and that's a scandal. Something should be done, and soon the Democrats in Congress will form a committee to look to address this problem."

John McCain: "Drill, baby drill, drill, baby drill – er, no comment."

Sarah Palin: "I know a darn lot about universal car care. Why, I could see the Alaskan oil pipeline from outside my kitchen window. I know my oil and always keep the snowmobiles topped up. So go out and getchaselves an oil change, and help America and NASCAR thrive."

The experts have spoken....but all kidding aside, automobiles today are terrifically expensive. The upside is that they are more dependable than they've ever been, and owners today have zero tolerance for any mechanical failures. That's the main reason cars have improved over the years. But again, cars are designed and made by people, and like people, they need preventative healthcare.

Delicious Disguises For Turkey Leftovers

Frankly, I think I like the idea of turkey leftovers as much or more than the turkey itself. Since eating leftovers is as traditional as the big dinner on Thanksgiving Day I'm open to imaginative ways to use them.

To begin, when you put those turkey leftovers away after the feast it's a good idea to carve the meat off the bone and refrigerate promptly. The less air that gets into the container the longer it will keep. Yet I would recommend using within a day or two. And don't throw those bones away! Save the carcass to make a broth and simmer away. Add any leftover vegetables to the strained broth and voila – turkey vegetable soup. Think of it as a good way to clean out the refrigerator and recycle all that good stuff.

Turkey sandwiches filled Dagwood style with evenly sliced turkey, cold stuffing, cranberry sauce, sweet red onion and a smear of mayonnaise, or turkey hash, a tasty comfort dish with cooked potatoes, stuffing and broth topped with poached eggs may not be that new or creative but they are certainly all time favorites. I can hardly wait!

TURKEY HASH

I believe this recipe was inspired by those two venerable culinary icons, Craig Claiborne and James Beard. Serves 4-6.

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
3 cups diced cold turkey
3 cups finely chopped, cooked potatoes
1 cup cold stuffing
3/4 to 1cup turkey or chicken broth
Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
4-6 poached eggs
Tabasco sauce
Chopped parsley
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

1. Melt butter with the oil in a large skillet and when butter foam subsides saute onions until translucent, about 3-4 minutes. Add turkey, potatoes and stuffing and stir to mix with the onion. Mix in broth and season to taste with salt and pepper. Toss mixture to blend well.

2. Place mixture in a large lightly buttered baking dish or in four - six individual greased baking dishes. Cover and bake for 20-25 minutes. Remove from oven, arrange poached eggs on top, and sprinkle with Tabasco sauce and parsley. Serve at once.

TURKEY VEGETABLE SOUP

Serves 8

For the broth
2 1/2 pounds, approximately, carcass from a cooked turkey
3 carrots, peeled
2 ribs, celery, trimmed
Leftover greens from scallions or leeks
For the soup
2 cups thinly sliced cabbage
2 large leeks, trimmed and thoroughly rinsed
2 carrots, trimmed and thinly sliced
1 turnip, peeled and cut into 1/2-inch dice
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 cup canned whole tomatoes, crushed
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary leaves or 1 tsp dried
2 boiling potatoes, peeled and cut into 1/2 inch dice

1. Place the turkey carcass and bones in a large saucepan with the carrots, celery and greens. Add water to cover, about 4 quarts, and bring to a boil. Skim any scum that rises to the surface. Reduce heat and boil mixture gently for 2 hours and strain. Yield about 2 quarts stock.

2. Pour turkey stock in a large, clean saucepan and add the prepared vegetables and seasonings, except potatoes, in the order they are given. Bring liquid to the edge of a boil, then adjust heat to a simmer and stir to mix. Cook with cover ajar for 1 hour to blend flavors.

3. Add potatoes to the soup and simmer for an additional 20 minutes until potatoes are tender. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Serve hot.

ROAST TURKEY, STUFFING AND CRANBERRY SANDWICH

For delicious leftover pickings assemble a sandwich with turkey trimmings. Serves 4-6.

1 round loaf of crusty Italian or French baguette
5-6 tablespoons light mayonnaise
1 1/2 cups old-fashioned turkey stuffing
1 cup cranberry sauce
3/4to1 pound turkey slices
1 medium red onion, thinly sliced
Salad greens, vinegar and oil for a simple salad, optional

1. Whichever bread you use, halve the bread horizontally. Hollow out the bread leaving a 1/2 inch thick shell.

2. Thinly spread both sides with mayonnaise then spread a generous layer of stuffing on one half of bread. Spread cranberry sauce over the stuffing then layer turkey slices and onion. Place the remaining bread half over the top.

3. Cover bread with plastic wrap and weight down with a heavy object (such as a coffee can) in refrigerator for an hour or two. When ready to serve, slice into portions and bring to room temperature. Garnish each plate with fresh salad greens, dressed lightly with vinegar and extra-virgin olive oil.

Review: Blue Sky Mediterranean Lounge

By Susan M. Galardi

Last week, I watched the film Ratatouille for the second time – it's required viewing for any foodie or any person who's ever been insulted in Paris. The scene where the feared food critic is taken back to a childhood memory with one bite of ratatouille is poignant.

I didn't have that Proust Madeleine moment at Blue Sky, but I did enjoy a very nice meal that would bring me back if not to childhood, to the restaurant itself.

Blue Sky is the welcomed replacement of Spinnakers on Main Street in Sag Harbor. The team behind it, owner Jerry Wawryk and executive chef/managing partner Giuseppe Desiderio, managed to completely change the feeling of the place, without doing a major renovation. The dining area is light, clean, lovely – with accents of blue and yellow oversized shades hanging from the ceiling.

We entered last Sunday to live piano music by William Falkenburg, who was playing in the very red, very cozy lounge in back. Blue Sky actually offers live music and/or DJs from Thursday through Sunday, a nice addition to nightlife in the town.

The menu is Mediterranean, taking cues from Italy, France and Spain. We started the meal with pita and crunchy sourdough bread, accompanied by hummus flecked with fresh parsley and redolent of garlic, as well as good quality olive oil. There seems to be a trend away from butter with the breadbasket, thankfully.

Appetizers, or "Small Plates" include salads, shellfish, pizetta and soup, ranging from $9 to $16. We started with a knock out: Bruschetta Duo at $13. I didn't expect to be wowed, but this was perfection on toast. There were two grilled slabs of sourdough, crunchy and pleasantly chewy, with two very different but complimentary toppings. One was classic Caprese – small cubes of fresh mozzarella and tomato, with either aged balsamic or a reduction, popping with fresh basil. The other was smoked salmon on arugula with crème fraiche. Really well done, and would be a great light brunch. We tried the Spinach & Baby Artichoke salad ($10). I expected fresh artichokes but got a jarred variety instead. No matter – they were fresh tasting in light oil with a strong hint of oregano. The toasted pine nuts and goat cheese added depth.

Main courses, ranging from $21 to $28, offer inventive fish and seafood dishes, pastas, chicken, lamb, veal – the works, and a nod to the Eastern Mediterranean with Moussaka. We went with two fish dishes, and both were quite good.

The star was Paella D'Espana ($27). This wasn't rice with seafood. It was seafood with rice. The dramatic presentation, with a lobster almost jumping out of the deep, square white dish, forecast the adventure to come. Every forkful revealed a delicious surprise: a tiny mussel, squid ring, chunk of salmon, shrimp, a slice of spicy sausage. Rice remained individual grains, in a savory, mild broth that let the seafood shine through.

The Shrimp Scampi ($25) with orzo and saffron sauce was also very good – but be warned, no butter was spared here. The sauce, flecked with tiny chopped chives, was rich and delicious. Small cubes of al dente zucchini and red pepper gave crunch and brightness.

Desserts range from gelato and sorbet at $4 to Trio aux Chocolate at $12.

The crème brulee with strawberry swirl and a flourish of peppermint was very eggy, hardly sweet, with not much crunch to poke through on top. The fruit tart was a puff pastry shell filled with deep red spiced pear and kiwi, topped with caramel sauce with a side of white chocoloate mousse and vanilla gelato. It didn't quite come together for me.

Wines by the glass, from $9 to $12, are predominantly Italian, with a French Sancerre and a few California offerings. By the bottle, it's a more even split between French and Italian, with Califonia, Spanish, Argentinian, Greek and local offerings also represented. Most are in the $30-40 range.

Specials at Blue Sky include a $25.00 pre-theatre dinner. The night we were there, a $24.95 Restaurant Week Special continued – similar to pre-theatre. (Call to confirm the prix-fix menus.) The bar/lounge menu, ranging from $9 to $14, includes pizetta, burgers, salads, pasta and meatballs.

QUOTE?
Dear Dan,

As a former employee of a business in Quogue for nearly twelve years and not a resident, I find it very disheartening that you feel the need to bash the Quogue Police Department on a regular basis.

I've read about a certain woman last year over and over again in your article who was accused of drunk driving and "roughed up" by the police. Were you there? You made a supposed quote made by the Chief of Police. You didn't even get his name right. Did you really ever get a quote or did you make something up just because it makes for a juicier article. We all need to put food on the table but you are not just talking about the police department, you are talking about hard working men and women dedicated to serving the community. If I lived in Quogue I would be happy to be served by them and should I need help in an emergency they are well qualified and professional. Please step out of the box and stop the bashing. It's gotten old.

God Bless All Police on Long Island and Thank You.

Kathleen Coughlan

I spoke to the Quogue Police spokesman and quoted what he told me. -DR

DOWN WITH FACTORY FARMING!
Dear Editor,

Last week, a failed vice-presidential candidate claimed that animals belong right next to the mashed potatoes. This week, our president is pardoning two turkeys. It's food for thought.

Each of us has the presidential power to pardon a turkey this Thanksgiving. It shows our compassion for an innocent animal, as well as our concern for our family's and our planet's health. It's a most fitting way to give thanks for our own life, health, and happiness.

The 270 million turkeys abused and slaughtered in the U.S. each year have nothing to give thanks for. They breathe toxic fumes in crowded sheds. Their beaks and toes are severed. At the slaughterhouse, workers cut their throats, and dump them into boiling water, sometimes while still conscious.

Consumers too pay a heavy price. Turkey flesh is laced with cholesterol and saturated fats that elevate the risk of heart disease, stroke, and cancer. Careful adherence to government warning labels is required to avoid food poisoning. Turkey excrements pollute our water supplies.

This Thanksgiving, I won't be calling the Poultry Hot Line, or staying awake wondering how that turkey lived and died. I will be joining millions of other Americans in observing this joyful family holiday with nonviolent healthful products of the earth's bounty: vegetables, fruits, and grains.

A visit to my local supermarket or health food store and an internet search on vegan Thanksgiving will provide me more recipes and delicious turkey alternatives than I can possibly use.

Sincerely,
Brian Williams

What we're told is the settlers and Indians ate turkey together at Thanksgiving. It's a tradition. -DR

VAROOM
Dear Dan,

Although I am grateful that automobile manufacturers warn us of the hidden dangers associated with air bags, I truly believe that vehicles delivered to Long Island dealerships should include an additional warning label. Caution: Driving on Long Island roads may be hazardous to your health. Like alcohol and cigarettes, driving on the Island could have serious consequences.

Each time I drive past my local Department of Motor Vehicles, I am overtaken with fond memories of my sixteenth birthday, and my early morning learner's permit written examination. I couldn't wait to take that exam. I vividly remember studying every word of that driver's manual. I knew the content of that manual so well that I could literally recite it in my sleep. It became an obsession. Like a thief in the night, I was slowly being robbed of my normal thought processes. I lived and breathed rules, regulations and a vast assortment of automobile trivia. When I walked into that examination room on that early autumn morning I was prepared. Nothing was going to stop me from getting my learner's permit and getting behind the wheel of my father's shiny red Ford Pinto station wagon. The first question displayed a stop sign symbol and asked what it meant. With little hesitation, I circled the correct answer; come to a complete stop and proceed slowly. The remaining nineteen questions were not nearly as simple, but neither were they too difficult. If you studied the manual there would be little chance of failing the exam. At the risk of sounding conceited, I passed with flying colors.

Although many years have passed since that memorable day, I still remember that concise little manual and its wealth of information. I continue to follow the rules of the road that were set forth between its covers. Unfortunately, like the way of the dinosaurs, I too feel destined to become extinct. A wayward asteroid like Tyrannosaurus Rex may not obliterate me, but I know that my driving habits are becoming a thing of the past. Like a stranger in a foreign land, I find it increasingly difficult to fit in. My fellow motorists on many Long Island roads no longer appreciate my daily custom of stopping at stop signs and red lights. Call me old-fashioned, but I only pass on the left never on the shoulder, which by the way is against the law. I am becoming preoccupied with the gnawing thought that quite possibly the new drivers manual is missing some very important pages. The next time I pass by the Dept. of Motor Vehicles I will pick up a new manual and review the material. Maybe all of the rules have changed. Until I find out, I will continue navigating the roadways cautiously and with common sense. One thing I do know for sure is that driving has truly become a religious experience for me. Each time I get behind the wheel and strap myself in, I glance heavenward and say a prayer. My earnest request to reach my destination unscathed is a valiant attempt to ward off offensive drivers who threaten my mortality on a daily basis. I hope it continues to work.

Police Blotter

Dropped

It was determined that the woman who showed up at a military airbase in Westhampton with an arsenal of machine guns and shotguns in the back of the car was doing nothing wrong. The woman, who describes herself as very patriotic, was at the air base to admire the planes. She also happens to be a gun enthusiast, legally owning an array of weapons. None of the weapons in the car were loaded and she is thankful that the misunderstanding has been resolved. Man, if she handled that any differently she'd be in Guantanamo by now!

Cat Fight

A woman from Eastport was arrested after beat up another woman. The woman was responsible for getting into a fight with another woman where she punched her in the head, pulled her hair scratched her face and kicked her, as well as stole the woman's cell phone. Police arrested the woman and issued an order of protection.

DWI

A man crashed his car into a tree and then fell asleep in the vehicle drunk. When police arrived they opened the door and found the man to slide out of the car in Southampton. They were able to revive the man, who thought he was having a nightmare, and began to scream like a girl at the top of his lungs. He was calmed down, put in handcuffs and given a safe place to stay for the night.

A jail cell.

Remote Control?

It was go time in an East Hampton household when a man became so angry at his wife that he threw a remote control at her. The husband had violated an order of protection after the incident when he showed up at his house in Springs. Police were called and he was asked to leave. The man said that he threw the remote control because his wife was nagging him insistently. When he threw the remote control, ironically, the television channel changed from an episode of "Family Guy" to an episode of "CSI New York." The television remains in the wife's possession.

Traffic Man

A man in Southampton was arrested in Southampton for deliberately standing in a traffic circle and disrupting the flow of traffic. They arrested him for disorderly conduct.

Trouble Makers

Southampton Town Police have launched a full investigation into the destruction of several streetlights that were shot out along Gin Lane and several other streets in the area. Each streetlight will cost about $100 to replace.
